JURORS STATEMENT:

It was a pleasure serving as a juror for the Palm Beach Watercolor Society. This exhibition displays a wide range of styles and approaches to the medium which made selecting the award winners a very challenging endeavor.

The award winners exhibited the qualities of sustaining the viewer's interest, demonstrating a mastery of the use of the elements and principals of design, and displayed a highly developed technique in manipulating their medium.

The exhibit is quite impressive and professional. Congratulations to all those who participated.

Joan Therien, Juror

Subject Matter: Color Mixing Changing the Rules

In this workshop you will explore color strategies that will make your paintings more dynamic. Learning how to make better color selection choices and how to determine and build a color strategy. Find answers to the common questions of what color choices will support the artists vision? How to strengthen the lights and darks for more dramatic effects. Determining what color groups will dominate and discovering the importance of neutrals

The morning will be devoted to a lecture with demonstrations, the afternoon will be applying what is learned to your own painting.

Ask the Watercolor Doctor: by Carol Z. Brody NWS

Question:

In a resume, should artists list all the shows they have participated in or just the shows they were juried into or received awards in?

Submitted by Lynne Koenigsberg

Answer:

That's a good question, Lynne, and one which has no definitive answer, Artists' websites and resumes will vary quite a bit, depending on the personality, style and experience of the artist. If you are just starting out as an artist and you want to build your resume, you might want to include everything you can to fill it out a bit. Many non-artists will not know the difference.

When I was beginning my career as an artist, I didn't have much to put into my resume, and so I listed every show I had been in, whether it was a local, regional or national show, juried or not. Over the years, however, I have made many modifications to my website and my resume, gradually and ultimately focusing on the more selective juried national and international exhibitions, and finally listing only the more prestigious ones. I also chose to list my awards under a separate category, although some artists will list them next to the organizations which gave them. I also chose not to list the years of the shows, since this became a tedious process and one which I felt didn't really matter. I think that as we grow as professionals, we trim our resumes to eliminate the "padding" and emphasize the more meaningful listings, which other professionals will appreciate and understand the value of.

If you are building your resume, you might want to look at those of artists whom you respect or perhaps those who are nationally known, just to get an idea of what you like and don't like. Then you can feel more secure in choosing what to include in your own personal website. Good luck!

I welcome your questions and comments, so please send them in to me at czbrody@carolzbrody.com. Thanks!
